Lathrop & Gage works with a wide variety of clients on matters ranging in geographic scope from local to national and international and in complexity from simple settlement meetings to massive class actions.

We have the experience and relationships to keep client litigation costs down by identifying competent local counsel, managing the administrative aspects of long-distance relationships and coordinating the legal positions of various local counsel. In some instances, we manage these processes for our clients.

The lawyers, paralegals and staff located in our offices across the country have the skills to manage your work on a local counsel basis, a regional counsel basis and nationally through legal and administrative expertise. Because the firm is located in the heart of the Midwest, we provide an excellent value with rates that are among the most reasonable in the United States.
