Andrew Biddison represents families, fiduciaries, and family businesses in matters including estate planning, estate and trust administration, business succession planning, and charitable giving. He drafts wills and trusts, advises clients on tax planning, and provides guidance related to the estate administration process.

Prior to joining the firm, Andrew was a summer associate in 2021 and 2022, where he performed legal research and collaborated on internal and client-facing projects with a primary focus on matters related to nonprofits, trusts and estates and employee benefits.

While in law school, Andrew furthered his tax skills serving as a student attorney at the Ronald M. Mankoff Tax Clinic, and later as student director. While serving at the tax clinic, Andrew represented clients on various individual income tax issues and gained direct experience interfacing with state and federal government agencies.
