Timothy J. Hadachek

Associate | timothy.hadachek@lathropgpm.com

Tim Hadachek is an associate with the firm's intellectual property litigation group. Tim represents clients on a wide range of intellectual property issues in federal courts and administrative tribunals across the United States. His experience spans a wide range of industries—including consumer products, logistics and transportation, energy, manufacturing, financial services, entertainment, sporting goods, and agribusiness—and covers all aspects of intellectual property issues—including patents, trademarks, copyrights, and trade secrets. In addition to his work on IP matters, Tim has extensive experience in general business litigation and dispute resolution.

While in law school, Tim was an editor and staff member of the Kansas Law Review. He was also a member of the Moot Court Council, through which he honed his oral argument skills in local and national moot court competitions. Also during law school, Tim gained practical lawyering experience through internships with Judge Steve Leben of the Kansas Court of Appeals, and with the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Kansas.
